j. The report shall be provided in standard three-ring notebook binders for ease of maintenance.

10.3 Content. The following shall be included in the Philosophy of Protection Report:

a. The Philosophy of Protection Report shall provide a description of the explicit and well-defined security policy enforced by the TCB and the environment, as appropriate The discussion shall include the applicable laws, rules, and regulations. This description shall be in enough detail to form the background for the philosophy of protection discussions.

b. The Philosophy of Protection Report shall describe the high-level TCB protection mechanisms derived from the policy. It shall describe the philosophy of protection for the TCB. This encompasses the enumeration of any assumptions and constraints, with the rationale and justification for using each. These assumptions and constraints may be applicable for justifying distribution of the security requirements through the TCB.

c. The Philosophy of Protection Report shall describe the environmental mechanisms supporting the policy. It shall provide an explanation of how the security policy is translated into environmental constraints, connectivity constraints, and the specific TCB protection mechanism(s). This discussion shall include any entity that enforces the security policy, either external or internal to the computer itself (e.g., physical access control, TCB access control).

d. The Philosophy of Protection Report shall describe the TCB mechanisms supporting the policy. It shall show how the philosophy of protection is translated into the TCB hardware, software, and firmware; as appropriate. The Philosophy of Protection Report shall relate the security requirements to the architecture.
