The decentration target shall be adjustable laterally five millimeters to either right or left of center, and shall be adjustable vertically to compensate for segment widths. One knob each at base of the instrument shall be provided for such fine adjustments.

The millimeter reticle target shall have a horizontal scale in one millimeter increments totaling five millimeters on either side of center and one millimeter increments totaling ten millimeters above and below center.

The stamping mechanism shall be hinged to the back of the unit and shall swing forward to mark the lens when hand pressure is applied. The stamp pad well shall be self-contained, with air seal to keep ink pad from drying out. The electrical components shall meet the requirements of the Underwriters Laboratories or National Electrical Manufacturer's Association Standards.
